Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people are invited to participate in #IHMayDay17 by:

- Sharing the names of your country and connections
- Sharing your thoughts, stories and photos on Twitter – particularly in relation to the theme: Representation: politics, policy and education.
- Sharing the news about your work for better health and wellbeing
- Retweeting tweets that are marked #IHMayDay17
- Pledging to fill your timeline with #IHMayDay17 – and to share the news about the event with your networks
- Encouraging politicians to listen to #IHMayDay17 and to participate
- Engaging with and supporting @IndigenousX

#IHMayDay17 is an annual Twitter event, led by James Cook University academic Dr Lynore Geia, that takes a strengths-based approach and privileges the voices of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people to discuss health matters.

On Wednesday, 17 May, #IHMayDay17 is co-hosted by the University of Canberra, in conjunction with Croakey.

At the University of Canberra, #IHMayDay17 is supported by Professor Radoll, the University of Canberra Collaborative Indigenous Research Initiative (UC CIRI), the Faculty of Arts and Design, and the Faculty of Health.

A program of guest tweeters will run from 7am until 10.15pm AEST. Discussions will be moderated by Dr Geia, Professor Peter Radoll, Dean of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Leadership and Strategy at the University of Canberra, and Croakey Contributing Editor, Ms Summer May Finlay.
